Where Alpine Winter Meets the Warmth of Home

The collection is set in a winter home in the Alps, where crisp air and quiet landscapes meet the warmth indoors. Here, nature becomes part of everyday life – on walls, shelves, and tables.

Forest Décor brings small woodland scenes into the home, while alpine hooks with chamois, ibex, golden eagle, Alpine cow, and marmot add both function and character to the hallway. New DecoBirds – the barn owl and common nightingale – stand with a calm presence, introducing a quiet sense of life to the room.

On a shelf rests a hand-carved marmot in linden wood, with watchful eyes and a gentle expression – a small companion from the mountains. At the table, a bullfinch-shaped napkin ring adds a subtle detail, while in the hallway, house-shaped keyrings wait to be taken along. Together, they show how nature's forms and traditional materials can settle naturally into the home.

Forest Décor

Small Scenes from the Natural World

Small wooden decorations inspired by the forest. Each piece – animals, mushrooms, and birds – is hand-carved in linden wood and painted to highlight its distinct form and character.

The figures are placed directly on a branch, as if emerging from twigs and foliage. They work just as well on their own as they do grouped together – set among spruce branches or paired with simple decorative twigs. Timeless pieces designed to return, season after season.

Material: linden wood, water-based acrylic paint, glass, hemp twine.

The lynxes large paws act like natural snow shoes, making it an almost silent hunter in the winter landscape.

Alpine Hooks – Animals of the Mountains

Hooks inspired by the wildlife of the Alps. Chamois, ibex, cow, golden eagle, and marmot are carefully carved in linden wood and painted by hand to bring out their distinct character.

Each hook balances function and presence. The sturdy metal hook supports everyday use, while the carved figures create a natural focal point – whether displayed individually or arranged together along the wall.

Material: linden wood, water-based acrylic paint, glass, brass-finished zinc alloy.

The golden eagle can spot prey several kilometers away and can dive at speeds up to 200 km/h.

Cottage Keyrings

Small houses with plenty of character. These keyrings, laser-cut from cherrywood, depict a range of architectural styles – from traditional cottages and cabins to modernist and half-timbered homes.

Hand-painted details give each piece a personal feel – familiar forms that bring a quiet sense of place to your everyday essentials.

Material: cherrywood, water-based acrylic paint, stainless steel.

Hand-carved Marmot

A small presence from the Alps. This hand-carved marmot in linden wood is painted to reflect its calm expression and gentle character. Placed on a shelf or windowsill, it brings a sense of stillness – like a quiet moment from the mountains carried indoors.

Material: linden wood, water-based acrylic paint, glass.

DecoBird

Barn Owl & Common Nightingale

The barn owl's steady gaze and the nightingale's song rising through the evening air. Two new additions to the DecoBird series, each carefully carved in wood and painted by hand.

With close attention to form and detail, they capture the character of each species – subtle reminders of the birdlife just beyond the window.

A nightingale can have over 200 different songs in its repertoire, and often sings long into the night.

Bullfinch for the Winter Table

A napkin ring shaped as the bullfinch, one of winter's most recognisable birds. Hand-carved in wood and painted to reflect its soft colours and rounded form.

A small detail that adds warmth to the table – bringing a touch of winter nature into everyday gatherings.
